ACTEC COMPARISON OF THE
DOMESTIC ASSET PROTECTION TRUST STATUTES
UPDATED THROUGH SEPTEMBER 2016

This September 2016 version of the chart updates the prior September 2015 chart.

This chart includes a new addition to the DAPT community, West Virginia, which enacted its statute effective June 8, 2016. This new statute is relatively thorough, but commentators have pointed out that in its present form a grantor does not have the right to disapprove distributions from the trust. As a result, a West Virginia DAPT cannot be formed for incomplete gifts. Future amendments may remedy this problem and perhaps also add other useful DAPT provisions.

This 2016 chart includes clarifications and expanded information for Delaware, Mississippi, and Missouri. Also included below are brief discussions of “Inter Vivos QTIP Trust,” which is a partial DAPT, and the proposed Uniform Voidable Transfers Act and its comments relating to DAPTs.

The following ACTEC state editors generously contributed, reviewed and edited their state’s subjects for accuracy:

INTRODUCTION

A domestic asset protection trust (hereinafter referred to as a “DAPT”) is generally an irrevocable trust with an independent trustee who has absolute discretion to make distributions to a class of beneficiaries which includes the settlor. The primary goals of DAPTs are asset protection and, if so designed, transfer tax minimization.

Prior to 1997, two states had statutory provisions which appear to support the formation of DAPTs. In 1997, Alaska was the first state to enact a usable DAPT statute. In the seventeen years since, thirteen other states have followed suit. There are now seventeen states that allow for the formation of DAPTs.

Ohio’s 2013 statute, Mississippi’s 2014 statute, and West Virginia’s 2016 statute are the most recently enacted additions to our chart.

Legislatures have taken different approaches. The original statutes are terse and only indicate a public policy (Missouri and Colorado). Some of the new statutes amend existing statutes, and others enact new “Acts”. Interest groups within the various states have influenced the extent of the asset protection provided by the statutes. Often a state’s enactments have followed a “camel’s nose in the tent” approach. The first statute may only provide minimal asset protection. Then, several years later the state legislature and interest groups become more comfortable with the DAPT approach, and more comprehensive provisions are enacted.

If implemented correctly, the DAPT approach may be used successfully by residents of states with DAPT statutes. An interesting issue remains whether nonresidents of DAPT states may form a DAPT under one of the DAPT state’s laws and obtain the desired asset protection and tax benefits. The analysis of this issue involves the conflict of laws. The most likely test is whether the nonresident’s domiciliary state has a “strong public policy” against DAPT asset protection. The fact that seventeen states now have DAPT statutes moves this approach from the eccentric anomaly category to an accepted asset protection and transfer tax minimization planning technique. As more and more states enact DAPT statutes, the conclusion that a non-DAPT state has a “strong public policy” against a DAPT trust seems less likely.

A new type of partial DAPT statute has emerged and has been referred to as the “Inter Vivos QTIP Trust.” These are statutes which specifically abrogate the rule against self-settled spendthrift trusts for lifetime QTIP trusts. These states include Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and Wyoming.¹ In essence, these statutes

Code Ann., Est. & Trusts § 14.5-1003; Mich. Comp. Laws § 700.7506(4); N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 564-B:5-505; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 36C-5-505(c); Or. Rev. Stat. § 130.315(4); S.C. provide that the assets of an inter vivos QTIP trust are not to be considered assets contributed by the settlor. As a result, the assets cannot be reached by creditors of the donor spouse after the death of the donee spouse.²

Another way in which some states have “placed their toe in the water” with respect to self-settled trust asset protection is to enact statutes which protect the assets in an irrevocable grantor trust from a creditor claim even though an independent trustee, in such trustee’s discretion, may reimburse the settlor for income tax resulting from assets in the trust. These states include Arizona, Florida, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oregon, New York, and Texas. Similarly, Arizona and New Hampshire protect the assets in a supplemental needs trust from the settlor’s creditors.

Enactment of asset protection for self-settled interests such as the “Inter Vivos QTIP Trust,” tax reimbursement, and supplemental needs trust, provides weight to the argument that those states do not have a “strong public policy” against self-settled trust asset protection, and therefore residents could form a DAPT under another state’s law. The same reasoning applies to residents of DAPT states who conclude their state’s DAPT statute is not as desirable as the statute of another DAPT state.

Reference to the map illustration on the last page of the chart illustrates that now more than half of the fifty states are either DAPT states or Inter Vivos QTIP Trust states.

In 2014, the Uniform Law Commission adopted amendments to the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, including new comments. The Act was renamed the Uniform Voidable Transfers Act, and the comments state that a transfer to a self-settled spendthrift trust is a voidable transfer per se. Further, the comments state that an individual who lives in a state that does not recognize DAPTs cannot protect assets by creating a DAPT in a state that does recognize DAPTs. Recent attempts by ACTEC fellow Richard W. Nenno to correct these comments were unsuccessful.³ Therefore attorneys who represent clients who are residents of non-DAPT states will want to research whether that state has enacted the above-described amendments and comments.

In 2015 the DAPT chart introduced three new subjects which are designed to summarize developing case law dealing with DAPTs. At present, DAPT cases are few. However, it is inevitable that the courts will be asked to resolve controversies involving the interpretation and application of DAPT laws. So far, there are only three DAPT cases, two involving Alaska’s statute, and one involving Delaware’s. The Alaska cases were mixed with fraudulent transfers, and the creditors prevailed. The Delaware case involved the application of a statute of limitations to bar the creditors, and the debtor prevailed. These cases can be found in Item 35 and Item 36 of the chart for those states.

³Richard Nenno and Dan Rubin, Uniform Voidable Transfers Act: Are Transfers to Self-Settled Spendthrift Trusts by Settlor in Non-APT States Voidable Transfers Per Se?, Steve Leimberg’s Asset Protection Planning E-mail Newsletter—Archive Message 327, dated August 15, 2016.

Planners will want to carefully review the DAPT cases which have been rendered. These cases will provide guidance concerning how courts are interpreting a particular state's DAPT law. In addition, often these cases will illustrate implementation errors which need to be avoided.

There are no known federal gift or estate tax cases involving DAPTs. However, the Service has issued two private letter rulings: PLR 9837007 (which held that contributions to an Alaska DAPT were completed gifts) and PLR 200944002 (which held that the assets of an Alaska DAPT would not be includible in the settlor's gross estate). Revenue Ruling 2004-64, 2004-2 C.B. 7, held that a trustee's discretion to reimburse the settlor for income tax paid with respect to DAPT income would not alone cause inclusion of the trust assets in the settlor's estate. This revenue ruling is instructive of the Service's attitude with respect to DAPTs.⁴

The DAPT chart below is designed to give the reader an easy and quick comparison of the various DAPT statutes. The intent of this chart is to provide an unbiased, objective, and non-marketing analysis. A "ranking" of the statutes is deliberately omitted in order to avoid any "marketing" taint.

A chart, by its very nature, is an oversimplification. The reader is urged to carefully analyze the provisions of a statute before implementing a DAPT.

1. What requirements must trust meet to come within protection of statute?	Trust instrument must: (1) be irrevocable; (2) expressly state AK law governs validity, construction, and administration of trust (unless trust is being transferred to AK trustee from non-AK trustee); (3) contain spendthrift clause. AS 34.40.110(a).	In trust, limited to future creditors.	Trust instrument must: (1) be irrevocable; (2) expressly state that DE law governs validity, construction, and administration of trust (unless trust is being transferred to DE trustee from non-DE trustee); (3) contain spendthrift clause. 3. Has the state legislature consistently supported DAPTs and related estate planning by continued amendments?	Yes, amendments enacted in: 2014, 2013, 2010, 2008, 2006, 2004, 2003, 2001, 2000, and 1998. Statute did not provide an attractive option when first enacted in 2010. As of July 2011, however, the statute is much stronger, reflecting considerable legislative support for DAPTs.

30. Is the trustee given “decanting” authority to modify the trust?	Yes AS 13.36.157, .158, .159.	Yes. The Colorado Uniform Trust Decanting Act, §§ 15-16-901-15-16-911, C.R.S. was enacted in 2016 and effective as of 8/10/16. The CO Act excepts from its operation the determination of whether a beneficial interest in a trust constitutes a “property interest” for purposes of a property division at divorce or legal separation and the divorce court’s authority over the trust interest, as well as perhaps other matters at divorce or legal separation. See, 15-16-903(6), C.R.S.	Yes	No, but trustee of trust or holder of a non-conforming power of appointment may conform to the statute.
31. What is allowable duration of trusts?	Up to 1,000 years. AS 34.27.051.	Up to 1,000 years	No limit for personal property, including LLC and LP interests, even if LLC or LP owns real property; otherwise, 110 years for real property.	No limitation. Rule against perpetuities does not apply to qualifying trusts.
32. Does state assert income tax against DAPTs formed by non-resident settlors?	No	Yes	No. However, does impose its income tax upon trusts that accumulate income for Delaware residents.	Trust is subject to HI income taxes generally, but not on income and capital gains accumulated for the benefit of non-residents.
